Consultant

Description

Consultants at Coherent Economics will have the opportunity to use their accumulated skills and expertise on a daily basis to help our clients solve their most pressing economic and financial challenges. They will also learn how to collaborate with experts and clients, and how to manage projects and teams.

We take great pride in our culture. The entire Coherent Economics team worked together to develop our Values, and each new team member must agree to uphold them. Our Core Values guide the firm's philosophy, vision, and strategy, and our Workplace Values guide our daily actions. Together, these values define who we are as a firm and as professionals.

Among our Workplace Values, you will find critical behaviors such as "challenge, celebrate, and support each other," "every challenge is an opportunity to learn," and "offer candid, timely, and actionable feedback." As a Consultant at Coherent, you will be a beneficiary of these values—and you will learn how to help pay it forward as you train and mentor your team members.

Responsibilities

Consultant is the first positions with formal supervisory responsibilities at Coherent Economics, and is, in some ways, one of the most challenging jobs at Coherent. Consultants must be able to apply their skills to create work product with an exceptionally high level of attention to detail and precision, while also contextualizing their work within the bigger picture of the consulting engagement, all while learning to provide good instruction and feedback to Research Analysts.

Consultants are expected to have advanced data analysis and research skills, know how to create professional-quality work product, and understand the economic consulting industry. Our work is engagement-specific, and responsibilities vary from project to project. You will be expected to:

Perform detailed research on securities, firms, industries, and markets

Analyze data using Microsoft Excel, Stata, SAS, and other programs

Identify and solve complex data problems

Design and oversee discrete analyses and projects; manage time effectively

Supervise Research Analysts and provide feedback, training, and mentorship

Present and explain work product to team leaders, experts, and clients

Audit work product using best practices

Identify and resolve weaknesses in methodologies, sources, and assumptions

Review, summarize, and analyze confidential discovery materials

Think critically about their work
